The Marine Band Concert Today. e concert of the Marine Band at the te House grounds this afternoon at White House grounds this afternoon at 5:25 o'clock promises to be one of the most interesting and valuable of the season. Prof. Fanciulli has arranged a program made up almost entirely of selections from the French composers. The program leads off with Fanciulli's own fascinating creation, "The Evening Star March," and ends with "Hail Columbia," but, excepting these, the selections are all illustrative of the style of the French school. The program is as follows: gram is as follows:

The Injunction Denied.

In the case of Thomas G. Pitchra agt. W. H. Moses, to enjoin the erection of a building on Wyoming avenue, Washington Heights, which, it is claimed, is being erected contrary to a covenant in the deed. Justice Bradley heard the answer yesterday, and denied the injunction. It was claimed that Moses' house obstructed the view of his neighbors, &c., the front of fifty feet being swelled beyond the line forty feet from the street. The court held that from the language of the covenant the buildings should not be nearer than forty feet, but did not exclude projections for ornamentation, and he did not see that irreparable injury was done by the respondent.

THE SHANN MURDER TRIAL.

Argument Ended and Adjournment After The Star's report of the Shann nurder trial at Trenton closed yesterday ex-Senator Vanderbilt held that Mrs. Shann's conduct was perfectly natural when the three strangers came and disnothing about autopsies or postmortem examinations, and having been chided by her physician for having already refused to allow one insurance agent to see the body, it was natural, imagining that these strangers were from the company, for her to allow them to ascend her stairs without crying out. She did not know that the company could not perform the autopsy itself. She knew it was an unseemly hour, and she demurred, but finding she was helpless, she made no further objection.

Counsel finished his argument with a peroration, and was followed by Judge Chauncev H. Beasley.

Judge Beasley finished his address at 1 o'clock, and court adjourned for an hour and a quarter.

Judge Abbett then announced that he would defer to the wishes of the jury, and deliver the charge this morning. Several of the jurors said they were quite exhausted, and wanted rest.

INTERPRETING THE DECISION.

Great Britain's View of the Paris Tribunal's Award.

In the British house of commons yesterday Mr. Thomas G. Bowles, conservative, member for Lynn, asked the government whether the award of the Bering sea tribunal of arbitration imposed upon Great Britain the obligation to forbid pelagic sealing by British subjects at any time whatever within a sixty-mile zone around the Privyloff Jelands. He also desired to be inever within a sixty-mile zone around the Pribyloff Islands. He also desired to be informed whether the award of the tribunal Estelle and her niece, Miss Ada Wilson of forbade British sealers to use firearms, nets by pelagic sealers and further restraints upon British sealers, while it imposed no obligation on the United States to restrict sealing on land at any time.

sealing on land at any time.

Further, Mr. Bowles said he desired to be informed whether the effect of the award would not be to give a practical monopoly to the sealing industry to the Americans and deprive British subjects of any share in that industry.

Sir Edwin Grey, parliamentary secretary of the foreign office, replying to the questions put by Mr. Bowles, said it was not considered that the effect of the award would be to give the Americans a monopoly of the industry. True, he added, the use of firearms in the capture of seals had been forbidden, a close season had been established and only sailing vessels would be allowed to engage in sealing. lowed to engage in sealing.

The award, however, imposed certain obligations upon the United States as well as upon Great Britain, and he could not admit that these obligations would act to the prejudice of British interests, as Mr. Bowles had suggested by his questions.
